PRESERVING AND CARING FOR THE SEVERN CATCHMENT

THE SEVERN

“Your River Needs You”

The Valley Hotel, Ironbridge, Shropshire
19 November · 09:30 - 17:00

The Severn is the longest river in the UK. It is unique and this precious environment is under threat from pollution, abstraction, habitat destruction, water quality issues, climate change, etc. The Severn's reputation as a fishery is unsurpassed and historically of great economic and recreational value.

We need your help to re-establish this great fishery.

The first Severn Fisheries Conference will be a major step forward in the road to recovery and return to former glory.

The Severn Rivers Trust is an independent environmental charity established to secure the preservation, protection, development and improvement of the rivers, streams, watercourses and water bodies in the Severn catchment, and to advance the education of the public in the management of water and the wider environment.

We know that streams and rivers are intimately connected to the landscapes they drain and the valleys through which they flow; a river in poor condition normally reflects a catchment in poor condition. Most problems can be addressed and most can be fixed in a manner that benefits all.

The Trust's vision is to have living, working landscapes that deliver employment, food and amenity without impacting on rivers and biodiversity, and without the need for heavy regulation and supervision.
